RC 011238

The focus of American Indian education has until recently been the acculturation and assimilation of the Indian by the dominant Anglo society at the expense of the Indian language, the culture, and the student. It resulted in frustration and low self-esteem for the students, coupled with high failure and high drop-out rates.

The Bilingual Education Acts of 1968 and 1974 and the Indian Education Act of 1972 have provided new funds and impetus for bilingual/bicultural education. Bilingual/bicultural education, as currently defined, involves maintenance of the indigenous language and the inclusion of that language into the daily curriculum of the schools.

The last ten years have seen responses to the bilingual/bicultural movement including the advocacy of more community involvement in the schools, the establishment of demonstration projects, and recommendations for changes in teacher education. The purpose of this literature survey is to identify information directly concerned with methods, projects, teacher education, and curriculum developments in the bilingual/bicultural education of the American Indian.
